Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-4, 10, 12-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kozicki et al (US 2004/0124407A1).

Kozicki et al disclose memory devices(paragraph 0003 and methods of forming the same. The device includes an ion conductor and at least two electrodes(paragraph 0010). Electrodes 120 and 130 are at either end of the ion conductor 140 (paragraph 0027 and Fig. 2). When a bias greater than a threshold voltage is applied across the electrodes, the electrical properties of the structure change(paragraph 0028). The electrodes are formed of polysilicon or a metal, and one of the electrodes may be formed of a material that dissolves in the conductor(paragraph 0034 and 0035). The material of the ion conductor material may include germanium-selenide with silver(paragraph 0056). Phase separated regions form in the phase change material (paragraphs 0058 and 0060) of the programmable structure. The supersaturated state is present before writing, as disclosed in paragraph 0083 . With respect to a temperature increase, it would be expected that with an applied voltage there would be temperature increase, as some of the energy would be dissipated as heat. Because the solid solution is supersaturated, it would be expected that some of the conductor is present as a precipitate at certain temperatures, and that at higher temperatures additional conductor would go into solution. The material of the core is amorphous(paragraph 0068).

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 5-9 and 20-26 are allowed.

Claim 11 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art of record does not teach or suggest the crystallinity nor the recited transformations recited in the allowable claims.
